REACHING NIRVANA

All apologies. This weekend will mark the 20th anniversary of Kurt Cobain's death. Something in the way. Has any musical movement in the two decades since the singer killed himself come close to affecting the type of change that Nirvana brought about?

New designs to protect post-Sandy NYC unveiled

Barrier. The 10 designs incorporate ideas to keep the city safe from future storms.

Ten proposed designs for improving the tri-state region's resiliency post-Superstorm Sandy were released on Thursday night, giving residents a glimpse at what New York City's communities that are the most vulnerable to extreme weather could look like.

Responding to a call for "innovative planning and design" that would promote resiliency in Sandy's aftermath, more than 140 submissions were whittled down to 10 designs.

"There's no question: Superstorm Sandy made clear just how vulnerable we are when it comes to climate change," Mayor Bill de Blasio said.

One proposal called the Big U is described as a "protective system around Manhattan" that wraps from West 57th Street down to Battery Park and back up to East 42nd Street.

Another design would install barriers called breakwaters along Staten Island's South Shore that, instead of just serving as sea walls, would also serve as habitats for local sea life.

The conceptualizations were borne of Rebuild by Design, a joint venture from the Hurricane Sandy Rebuilding Task Force and U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development that launched last summer.

Subway surfer dies riding 6 train

The man was riding the 6 train in the Bronx. / GETTY IMAGES

A 45-year-old man died Wednesday night after his head hit subway infrastructure as he rode atop a 6 train in the Bronx, police said.

The subway surfer, whose named was not yet released, struck the overhead object at about 10:15 p.m. while riding a northbound train on elevated track from the Whitlock Avenue station to the Elder Avenue station in Soundview, according to police and fire department officials. The man suffered severe head trauma and was pronounced dead at the scene.

Witnesses told police the man was walking between cars before he climbed to the roof of the train, an NYPD spokesman said. It wasn't immediately clear what the man hit, but that it was likely a piece of subway infrastructure.

"This the dumbest thing anyone could possibly do," Metropolitan Transportation Authority spokesman Kevin Ortiz said of the incident.

News broke Thursday afternoon that "Late Show" host David Letterman plans to retire in 2015.

Variety reports that the longtime host discussed it during Thursday's taping, leading to some Twitter leaks over the course of the afternoon.

Court upholds NYC ban on worship services in schools

Religion. The ruling determines that the city regulation was constitutional.

A federal appeals court on Thursday ruled that a New York City regulation banning religious worship services inside school buildings after hours was constitutional.

In a 2-1 decision, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the New York City Board of Education's regulation, created so the city would not be perceived as endorsing religious activity in a public forum, "was consistent with its constitutional duties."

The rule prohibits school buildings from being used for religious worship services or as a house of worship, but the city allows groups to use schools for non-religious activities.

Singling out religion

"To single out the religious users and call that a subsidy is like saying the government subsidizes a Jewish synagogue by allowing it to hook up to the water system."
Jordan Lorence

The appeals court's decision marks the latest chapter in a two-decade legal battle over the regulation.

The 2nd Circuit said the regulation reflected the Board of Education's "reasonable concern to observe interests favored by" the Establishment Clause of the U.S. Constitution, which provides for a separation of church and state, while avoiding "the risk of liability under that clause."

Thursday's ruling marked the sixth time the case was before the 2nd Circuit.

In the case, the Bronx Household of Faith, a conservative Congregational church, said the city's regulation violated its constitutional right to exercise religion free from government interference.

Jordan Lorence, a lawyer for the Bronx Household of Faith, said he was disappointed with the ruling.

Lawyers for the city did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Health. Fish market infections double

Infections originated in Chinatown fish markets. / MILES DIXON, METRO

The number of New Yorkers suffering from a rare skin infection doubled within the last month, according to the city's Health Department.

On Thursday, the city said there have been 66 reported cases of the infection, which was predominantly found to affect those who handled live or raw seafood in the Manhattan, Brooklyn or Queens Chinatowns.

The Health Department's earliest report about the outbreak was in early March, when there were only 30 reported cases. However, officials said on Thursday that most of the recent cases likely sought medical attention for existing conditions after the department released more information on the outbreak.

"Most people seem to have been infected last fall, with a few having reported that their symptoms started more recently," a spokesperson with the agency said.

Queens Library announces reforms

The Queens Public Library said on Thursday it had adopted several reforms, including the creation of an audit committee.

The reforms come amid a scandal surrounding the high salary and spending of the library's president and CEO. Thomas Galente collected a $390,000 salary while also moonlighting as a consultant, the New York Daily News reported. Among the reforms, the library established a revised conflict of interest policy for senior officers to limit outside employment.

Drugs. Cops in NY to carry heroin antidote

Cops around New York State will start carrying a heroin antidote powerful enough to reverse the effects of an overdose.

Attorney General Eric Schneiderman unveiled the program on Thursday with a $5 million price tag, which will be funded through money recovered from criminal and civil seizures. Across the state, more than 2,000 New Yorkers died of opioid overdoses in 2011.

"Heroin is destroying our communities, and it's time we looked at broader solutions to fight back," Schneiderman said.

NY police officer cleared in accidental shooting of Hofstra student

A police officer who accidentally shot dead a student at a suburban New York university, while responding to an armed robbery at her apartment, has been cleared of all wrongdoing, authorities said.

Nassau County policeman Nikolas Budimlic was justified in shooting at an armed robber who was using Hofstra University student Andrea Rebello as a shield, a report by the county district attorney said on Wednesday.

VLADIMIR PUTIN'S POLL VAULTING

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

Scarcely was the news out before the Kremlin was unfurling banners, hiring a deejay and ordering pizzas for the party. At least that is what I imagine. After all, it's a good day when the American public declares your leader not the worst person ever.

It sounds like an April Fools' prank, but a new poll from Quinnipiac University found that most Americans do not think Vladimir Putin is as bad as Hitler. Granted it was close, with just 51 percent nixing the Putin-Hitler equivalency, and almost a quarter endorsing it. And, in a sad comment on the state of education, one in five said they don't know enough about World War II to have an opinion.

Still, this must be a relief to the Russian president. His crew steamed into Ukraine, copped the Crimean peninsula like a dropped wallet and, aside from some economic harrumphing from the international community, that was pretty much it.

But back to this Hitler thing. Despite the vote in Putin's favor, it's probably not good to have your name booted around in such a poll. Far better for people to be voting on things like, "Who is funnier: Chelsea Handler or Putin?" Or maybe, "Putin or Pushkin: Pick your Russian dream date!" Or even, "You only have one gulag. Who do you send: Putin or Carrot Top?"

Those are the sort of fun-loving polls the Red Square gang could really celebrate, especially considering that even on a good day their leader bears a resemblance to a Bond villain. He also looks a bit like the evil, bald twin of actor Daniel Craig, who plays Bond. Go figure.

Then again, maybe Putin's friends are not at all encouraged by any of this news. His pals may be sorely disappointed that he has (at least for the time being) stopped before rolling up half of Ukraine. Perhaps they are sitting around scarfing herring casseroles, swilling vodka and congratulating themselves on the Crimea gambit, but on the way home saying, "You know if Vladimir would just toughen up a bit, then we'd really have a leader!"

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

New poll. Voters cool to Christie and warm to Warren from Mass.

New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie fell to ninth place from his top spot among favored U.S. politicians after a scandal over traffic lane closures on the George Washington Bridge, according to a Quinnipiac University ranking on Thursday.

The poll measuring Americans' sentiment toward political leaders was taken last week as the well-known Republican, who is often mentioned as a possible 2016 U.S. presidential contender, released an internal investigation two months after "Bridgegate" came to light.

Army: Shooter showed no suicidal tendencies

The soldier suspected of shooting dead three people before killing himself at the Fort Hood Army base in Texas was under psychiatric care, but showed no signs of violence or suicidal tendencies, a U.S. official said on Thursday. No motive was given for the rampage, which also left 16 wounded, in what was the second mass shooting at the base in five years, raising questions about security at U.S. military posts. Officials have so far ruled out terrorism. REUTERS

Exercise 9: The Lips

Effect

This exercise stimulates collagen production and blood circulation. It reinforces the contour of the mouth and makes the lips fleshier.

Note

You should feel strong tension, as if both nostrils were coming together. If the contraction becomes too uncomfortable, stop the exercise and resume it later.

Technique

Press the lips together, pushing them forward in an exaggerated manner, as if you wanted to kiss. Maintain maximum tension. Hold for 5 seconds, then release. Repeat 10 times.

Can exercising your face replace Botox?

Beauty. Catherine Pez, author of "The 5-Minute Facial Workout," believes it can.

It's a big claim: According to Catherine Pez's new book, "The 5-Minute Facial Workout: 30 Exercises for a Naturally Beautiful Face," exercising facial muscles will lift, firm and arrest wrinkles.

"Exercising your face is as healthy for your skin as exercising is for your body," Pez tells Metro. "Exactly like in the body, muscle contractions improve the firmness of our face."

Pez, a 66-year-old mother of four, teaches facial gymnastics at conferences and workshops. Her exercise routine suggests working the more than 50 facial muscles for five minutes each day. It's designed with men and women in mind.

There aren't any studies proving facial gymnastics' effectiveness, but Pez's homespun wisdom says that, like skin, over time muscle fibers loosen and stretch. Toning the muscles counters sagging and also pumps more oxygenated nutrient-rich blood to withering tissue.

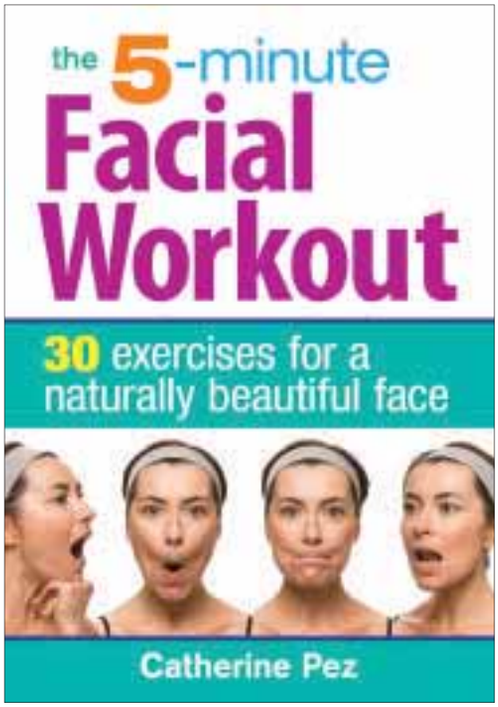
Doctor Marco Harmaty, a plastic surgeon and assistant professor of surgery at Mount Sinai's Icahn School of Medicine, questions the plan's effectiveness.

"It doesn't have any science behind it, so it's hard to make a case for it," he says. "It's counter to the methods of cosmetic surgery and Botox, which is a multi-billion dollar industry worldwide. Stretching out the skin and making muscles stronger and deeper could actually cause skin to wrinkle."

But he isn't opposed to the exercises altogether. "I tried some myself and it relaxes muscles, and makes you more at ease. That instantly gives a more rejuvenated look."

He says the effects are short-term, but that "you're possibly increasing blood flow to give a bit of a lift."

"Overall, it's harmless, but wrinkling up your skin probably causes wrinkles," he adds.



Catherine Pez / PROVIDED

Pez claims results are quick.

"Improvement depends on several factors, such as genetics, face shape, age and initial skin state," she says. "We generally see noticeable results after two weeks of exercising the facial muscles at least twice a week."

Exercise 27: The Forehead

Effect

This exercise prevents forehead wrinkles from becoming embedded and relaxes the upper part of the face out to the temples.

Technique

In front of the mirror, your head held level and high, your shoulders relaxed, raise your forehead toward your hairline. Repeat 10 times, in short intervals.

Note

This movement pulls the eyebrows upward. Through force of repetition, you should feel your ears move. Mastering this exercise is not easy, but it is quickly acquired.

Cooking with Sansa

Did you know there was a "GoT" cookbook?
What would people want to cook? Ew.

You've obviously never used it.
Never. I barely cook — I can just about do spaghetti.

I hate them. And last season I was eating lemon cakes in this one scene and we had to do 10 setups. I counted and I ate just over 50 cakes. Mini ones, but I felt so fat and I hate them. So annoying.

SOPHIE TURNER

SANSA STARK NEEDS TO HEAR A GOOD JOKE

After giving fans time to grieve for those who were brutally slain at the end of Season 3, "Game of Thrones" is back for another round. Actress Sophie Turner, who plays Sansa Stark, says that fans should expect more of the same: more blood, more trauma and more lies as the fight for the Iron Throne continues.

You're a Lannister now. How does that feel?
Sansa Lannister. Great.

Really?
No! It's fun for me because I get to spend more time with Peter (Dinklage), but for Sansa, it kind of sucks because these are the people who killed her father.

Have you read all the books?
I only read my chapters. I flick through the books and mark them down. The third one is a really difficult read — have you read it?

I'm afraid not.
I don't blame you. The writing is tiny. I'm always Wikipedia-ing it to get a sense of what's going to happen. More misery, that's what's going to happen.

Have you ever searched for yourself on Wikipedia?
I would never do that. Although I did do that once to prove that I was 16 when I was on a train and wanted a child ticket. That was the first and the only time I ever did that, by the way.

Sansa always looks so depressed. Does that not make you sad?
At first I couldn't master how to cry and draw that emotion so I just used my personal life. My grandma was really ill at the time and so I started thinking about her, but it just got me really down. And then I realized that you actually have to act and pretend you're in the situation.

So how do you do it now if you can't think of your grandma?
Her story is so sad that every time something s—y happens, I feel like crying anyway. I'm a broken woman.

What would she need to genuinely belly laugh?
Someone should fart because that's undeniably funny. If Joffrey farted on the Iron Throne!

Joffrey is as repulsive and disturbing as ever — don't you sometimes want to punch him?
I do. He's so creepy. But you love to hate him.

Is he a good kisser at least?
I guess — he wasn't bad! I was 14 when it happened. It was an innocent peck. I'll let you know when I have a full-blown snog.

Who would you want that to be with?
There are a lot of fine young men on the show. I think Sansa would like to kiss Loras Tyrell, but he's gay. She wants some affection, even if it is gay affection.

Bonus question

Things have got to be pretty messed up in Sansa's head. What would happen if she went to therapy?

I feel like she'd kill the therapist. If anyone asked her how she was feeling she'd explode. Damn, I feel so sorry for her.

HERE WE ARE NOW

Entertain us. Though Nirvana only put out three proper albums before Kurt Cobain killed himself (20 years ago this Saturday), their impact has echoed in the momentous musical years since his death. PAT HEALY

1994

1995

1996
Foo Fighters, featuring Nirvana's Dave Grohl and Pat Smear, become huge!

1997
Radiohead release "OK Computer," which is a good thing, but Creed release "My Own Prison," which is a very bad thing.

1998
Britney Spears releases her "... Baby One More Time" single, opening the doors for her former "Mickey Mouse Club" cast mates like Christina Aguilera and JC Chasez and Justin Timberlake of 'N Sync.

1999
Woodstock '99 is dominated by pissed off rock/rappers like Limp Bizkit and Rage Against the Machine. It turns into a huge, violent mess. By this time, MTV has pretty much stopped airing music videos.

2000
Metallica sues Napster (oh well), boy bands dominate music (whatever) and Eminem releases "The Marshall Mathers LP" (nevermind ... actually, wait, this is good!)

2001
The Strokes release their debut, "Is This It?" It is it, apparently, and leather-clad NYC bands become the new millennium's version of flannel-clad bands from Seattle.

2002
The iPod arrived in late 2001, but this was before people lined up outside of Apple stores to buy new wares from the computer company. By 2002, most music lovers with $300 to spare had invested in one.

2003

2004

2005
Deadmau5 releases his debut album and DJ culture begins to reclaim an even bigger global audience.

2006
The mashup goes mainstream, with Danger Mouse having released "The Grey Album" two years previously, he paves the way for Girl Talk, who releases his genre-defining work, "Night Ripper" in 2006.

2007

2008
Lady Gaga releases her debut, "The Fame."

2009
Michael Jackson dies. Kanye embarrasses Taylor Swift.

2010
The world learns what dubstep is and who Skrillex is.

2011
Arcade Fire win Album of the Year Grammy, which is a good thing, but Amy Winehouse dies, which is a very bad thing.

2012

2013
Miley Cyrus grows up, sticks her tongue out too much and twerking becomes too popular. Cyrus (born in November 1992, as Nirvana wrapped up their "Nevermind" tour) has been known to cover Nirvana's "Smells Like Teen Spirit" live. This same year, "Teen Spirit" gets a workout in Jay Z and Justin Timberlake's "Holy Grail."

Who needs to change? Me or ...?

"Repent therefore, and turn back, that your sins may be blotted out, that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord..."
Acts 3:19

Repentance is the fundamental message of the gospel. Unfortunately, many of us spend more time thinking about all the changes that need to happen around us, rather than the change we need to make in our own lives. The gospel is our opportunity to become what God wants us to be – His servants. Are you willing to change?

Homecoming.

After five years, Asher Roth — best known for the hit "I Love College" — is set to release his second full-length album, "RetroHash."

Roth's first album, "Asleep in the Bread Aisle," was released in 2009 under the Island Def Jam record label. This second album, however, is largely self-released.

"It was just a matter of finding the right home," Roth says. "No worrying about the marketplace or any trying to get into the head of the consumer that the business tries to do. Just really concentrating on making dope music."

After being mostly absent from the rap scene for five years, Roth says he is excited to release a new album. But he has put out four mixtapes and stresses that there was never a lull in his creativity.

Roth says "RetroHash" is evidence of his maturation. Living in L.A. helped him grow up and gave his album a feeling of renewal.

"It's different, man," Roth says. "It's just me being who I am, very freedom-oriented. I'm really excited to share this with the world, let them know who I am."

The album, he says, was made in a very laid-back manner. "It was the way it was supposed to be, man. No sitting around, A&Rs checking me saying, 'You need to do this, you need to do that.' It was literally hanging out in the living room, recording vocals in the living room."

The album got its title, an anagram for Asher Roth, after his girlfriend emailed him a list of anagrams as a joke. "It was just one of those things that was meant to be," says Roth. "[We were] nearing completion of the album and the vibe. It sounds and it feels like 'RetroHash.'"

Making heads or tails of 'Red Vienna'

Nina Arianda was Broadway's newest "it" girl from her first night onstage in Manhattan Theatre Club's "Venus In Fur" — even before she took home the 2012 Tony Award for her portrayal of a seductive actress with an audition and an agenda. Whatever her next move would be, Arianda would have to choose it carefully, of course; the favor of critics is harder to court than a cocky director at a casting call.

David Grimm's "Tales from Red Vienna," off-Broadway at New York City Center, turned out to be Arianda's next theater project. To her merit, it underscores her dedication to new works and her loyalty to MTC. However, there's room to criticize her risk in choosing a play that was, even after opening, still deciding what it wanted to be.

The play follows the fall of a socialite whose husband dies in World War I, leaving her penniless. Desperate, she turns to prostitution to make ends meet. While the decision puts a few dollars in her pockets, it could cost her standing in society. When one man — a pesky socialist, as luck would have it, and a journalist, whichever's worse — comes along with the potential to reveal her, a bartered affair begins.

One can see the parallels between "Venus" and "Vienna" that might have attracted the burgeoning starlet: In both, she gets to play a sexually empowered woman who is wrestling against patriarchal constructs. They're meaty, memorable roles that keep their player center stage — and dressed flatteringly; Anita Yavich's costumes elevate the widowed Helena to regality, tastefully reminding us of her happier past. But the newer play's messages are clumsy, taking on more meaningfulness than the work can successfully execute.

The other actors share in doubt or misunderstanding of the script, making new and incompatible choices in every scene. More focus on the writing — maybe one solid workshop — might have uncovered the show's cracks and given the team time to mortar them. Instead, after a last-ditch plot twist that further clouds the characters' motives, the play simply chooses an end that doesn't require it to choose an end.

We get there on beautifully detailed sets by the great John Lee Beatty, even if the large pieces (a fraying parlor and romantic mausoleum) do box in the action and underutilize the broad and deep Stage 1. Besides which, changing them back and forth seems to require an intermission, as the play inexplicably has two.

So "Red Vienna" seems to be a vehicle better suited for a greener Nina Arianda. She clearly saw its promising seeds, for lack of fertile ground. But at least this seemingly quixotic pick wasn't predictable: The theater community will have to stay on its toes, wondering what stage's reigning "one to watch" will be doing next.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

The interlocking Marvel Cinematic Universe is now nine titles in, and what does it have to show for itself? Is the new "Captain America: The Winter Soldier" all that different from "Thor: The Dark World," much less "Captain America: The First Avenger"? Will you remember which goofy but sometimes hectic romp had the end-of-the-world plot hatched by grim, angry aliens, and which one by Robert Redford?

The "Captain America" wing has a problem the others don't: Captain America is boring. That's not to say Chris Evans, the actor playing him, is dull; he gives Steve Rogers a dry wit that makes him more than an invincible super-soldier who can almost certainly never be stopped. Here he gets a mighty foe: the mysterious Winter Soldier — we can't tell you who it is without spoiling the film. But the best this baddie can do is be roughly Captain America's equal, meaning our hero is still never really in harm's way.

This time Cap, now firmly in the present, has to fight an agency that's moving — in a bit of hesitant topicality — toward a surveillance state. (Its biggest cheerleader is embodied by Redford, playing oily for the first time since "Indecent Proposal.") Circumstances orchestrate for our hero to go into hiding, aided by the Black Widow (Scarlett Johansson) and eventually the winged Falcon (Anthony Mackie).

Directors Anthony and Joe Russo are "Community" veterans who keep things funny and character-driven. But they're still at the behest of a corporate beast. They're nice enough to give us a pair of intense action scenes that put major supporting characters in the line of possible death. The whiff of danger adds enough spice to a series that should have crapped out by now.

THE BEST PLACE IN TOWN TO CELEBRATE YOUR BIRTHDAY

"Under the Skin" is an art house "Species," with Scarlett Johannson as a seductive killer alien trolling for horny bros. That's a glib way of putting it, but director Jonathan Glazer ("Sexy Beast," "Birth") wants to play with our expectations, even as he's beating his film into a strange shape. He lifts from Kubrick, Ingmar Bergman, Jordan Belson, Claire Denis, Nicolas Roeg and more, but the end product still feels unique.

Credited only as "The Girl," Johansson's character cruises around town in a van, stopping to ask directions of young men. Those who get in, hoping for a night with a ScarJo lookalike, wind up immersed in tar-black fluid. Some, but not all, of these pickups are real: Johansson really did drive around Glasgow, hitting on men while disguised in a black wig and using a not bad British accent. When she's not doing these scenes, she's mesmerizingly impenetrable. She's not a blank, but you scan her face for any feeling when she watches two people drown in the ocean, doing nothing.

"Under the Skin" sometimes feels like it should be more elusive, but the moment you try to lock it down it slips away from you, going off into weirder territory. It's spacey and hypnotic, and it plays with, not ignores, its star's popularity. Johansson is relaxed, yet creepily distant. You get the sense of a consciousness that is legitimately alien, one alien to her and us. Her character, Johansson and the film are always just out of touch. MATT PRIGGE

1 Heidi Klum thinks her shoes have feelings

Klum / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

We spoke to a tanned and suited Heidi Klum on Wednesday as she plugged her new Dr. Scholl's DreamWalk insole line in New York City. After wearing heels for more than 20 years, she told us she was happy to find something that actually makes her comfortable in her up-to-7-inch sky-high shoes. (Whew! There! We let her have her plug.)

We hope Heidi's got boatloads of those insoles, because she has a basement full of shoes. "I've collected some very nice shoes and don't want to get rid of them," she said. "Otherwise, they will get mad!"

Mmhmm. Moving on. Klum told us she's "doing very good" despite a recent breakup with her bodyguard Martin Kristen and her 2012 divorce from her hubby of nearly seven years, Seal.

Her new suitor had better be comfortable dating a tall, leggy model who also wears heels — looks like Klum's not trading her heels for flats anytime soon. LASSE EMIL KRISTIANSEN

Mann's feelings are on the red carpet

Leslie Mann got a little too familiar with the backside of Cameron Diaz at the U.K. premiere of their new movie "The Other Woman" on Wednesday in London.

2 Best family vacation ever for Scottish girl

Franco

It's clear he knew about her jailbait status: Franco sent Lucy Clode, 17, a direct message on Instagram asking, "You're 18?" When she wrote back "nearly 18," he even asked her when her birthday was.

Franco met Clode outside of his play "Of Mice and Men," where she asked him to pose for a selfie with her. She captured a video of him telling her, "You gotta tag me."

She did, and he promptly direct-messaged Clode, who is visiting New York from a town called Dollar in Scotland. During the conversation, Franco asks Clode how long she is staying in New York and if she has a boyfriend. It escalates from there.

In the texts, Franco asks, "Can I see you?"and "You're single?" Most incriminating, he asks her, "Should I rent a room?" Clode shared the texts with a friend who quickly posted them to Reddit. Some are speculating that this is a publicity stunt for Franco's new movie, in which he plays an older man seducing an underage teenager. And now the rumors have provided him with the perfect excuse.

Obamacare is positive

Re: 'Americans want care, not highway robbery' (Metro, April 3) The recent letters saying that health insurers make huge profits of 20 percent and are complaining because it's not their usual 30 percent are ridiculous. Their average profit margin is around 4.5 percent, a fact that can easily be looked up online. This is on the low end of the spectrum as far as corporate profits are concerned. As for expanding government insurance such as Medicare (because the government does not have a profit motive like the evil insurance companies), private insurance's administrative costs run about 5 percent less than what it costs the government per enrollee. In short, insurance company profits are not much of a medical cost driver, and those same insurance companies administer claims far more efficiently than the government does. RON SHELTON, VIA EMAIL

Maria Termini's concerns about the U.S. health care system are duly noted, but saying "the ACA is not positive reform" ignores the fact that about 10 million people have access to health care now who did not before the law. She also ignores that the rise of health care costs since the law was passed is at the lowest rate in decades. Don't be fooled into making the perfect the enemy of the good. CHARLES HALL, VIA EMAIL

LEGER DOUZABLE

The defensive lineman has finally found a home with the Jets, and the team and fans have head coach Rex Ryan to thank for keeping him onboard.

'I LOVE PLAYING FOR REX'

Jets defensive end Leger Douzable feels he has found a home after four stops in seven seasons. A free agent signing last year, Douzable came in and impressed from the edge position. He turned his 2013 success into a one-year contract to extend his stay in New York.

He spoke with us about his new contract, a future in television and playing for Rex Ryan.

Before you signed with the Jets, was this the place you wanted to play or did you want to test the waters for other offers?
They offered awhile back. I entertained a little bit but I knew where I wanted to be. I wanted to be in New York. Me and [linebacker] Calvin [Pace], we talked a lot in the offseason and him coming back — he told me he really wanted to come back. Having [defensive] line coach [Karl] Dunbar and Rex there another year helped me in making that decision.

You're the first person to ask me and that had a major impact on me coming back. What better market to be in to work on your craft for after football than New York City? I did some work with SNY last year and I plan on doing some more work with them this offseason. That was a piece of the pie for me coming back, definitely.

You've spoken in the past about playing for Rex Ryan. How much did it mean to you that he was coming back for another season? Did that impact your decision at all?
After I called my mom, that was the next person I called. Him coming back was major for me coming back. Playing for Rex was great. He was a great coach and a great person, period. He got a bad rep from some in the media. He's a guy you will go to war for and he will go to war for you. I know that. I love playing for Rex.

He was super excited that I got it done. He said he had been waiting for me to give him a call. He thought it'd be done a little while ago. But he was glad we got it done. We talked about the offseason and what they see me doing.

What is so special about Rex? Players always seem to sing his praises.
His energy. He comes to work with a lot of energy every day. When we come to a game, we know exactly what we're going to do. The guy preps like no other. It's great to play with a guy like that, he wears his emotions on his sleeves but you know that he cares. You come into work every day, you're ecstatic to work because of his energy.

Mets swept in opening series by Nationals

Three games into the season and the Mets still have 90 wins left to meet their goal.

The Mets were swept by the Nationals in their season-opening series, losing 8-2 on Thursday.

Zack Wheeler was solid — six innings, three runs — in his first start of his sophomore season. But the bullpen was dreadful again, surrendering four runs total in the seventh and eighth innings.

Curtis Granderson did pick up his first two hits of the season — both doubles — but Ryan Zimmerman's 4-for-5, two-RBI day trumped his performance. METRO

Murphy was 1-for-3 in the loss. METRO

Agent: Johnson gone from Titans

Titans running back Chris Johnson is not long for Tennessee, so says his agent. Joel Segal told SiriusXM his player could be released or traded by Monday's offseason workouts. Though he isn't sure of an exact date, Segal said Johnson won't be back with the Titans. The 28-year-old has been linked to the Jets.

Block party over

Obekpa leaving St. John's

The exodus continues at St. John's.

The school announced Thursday sophomore Chris Obekpa will be leaving the program and exploring transfer opportunities.

"We wish Chris good luck as he moves toward his next opportunity," said head coach Steve Lavin.

The 6-foot-9 Obekpa isn't polished on the offensive end, but is one of the top defensive players in the country. He averaged 3.8 points, 4.8 rebounds and 2.9 blocks per game last season.

JaKarr Sampson announced last month he will enter the NBA Draft. Also, Max Hooper will leave the program after graduating in three years to play elsewhere. METRO

Talking postseason

Jackson: Knicks will be tough out in playoffs

The Knicks just snuck into the final spot in the playoffs Wednesday night, but new president Phil Jackson is already talking tough.

Jackson met with reporters at practice on Thursday and told the media no one will want to meet the Knicks in the playoffs — should they qualify.

"Well, with J.R. [Smith] playing at the level he's playing at now, yes, [they'll be tough to beat]," Jackson said. "Now they have more than one option out there on the floor, and I think that we'll give teams trouble."

The Knicks lead the Hawks by percentage points for the No. 8 spot in the Eastern Conference, but still trail by one game in the loss column.

New York plays the Wizards, who currently hold the sixth spot, on Friday night. The Wizards have already locked up a playoff spot. Atlanta, meanwhile, hosts the Cavaliers on Friday.

Jackson was also already comparing his star, Carmelo Anthony, to past superstars he coached.

"Carmelo's really stepped into another level of trying to help players," Jackson said. "And I've been fortunate to have coached two of the great ones who have been able to do that in Michael Jordan and Kobe Bryant." METRO

When the "Magic Pill" isn't so magic

What do men do when Erectile Dysfunction pills aren't effective? Don't like the idea of expensive penile injections, suppositories, and vacuum pumps? Get the facts on an inflatable penile prosthesis (IPP): a permanent solution—covered by many insurance plans—which allows an erection as often as you like, for as long as you wish. An IPP can restore your sexual confidence.

Attend a FREE seminar sponsored by Coloplast Corp. to educate men and their partners about an advanced, DRUG FREE treatment for E.D.

DO YOU HAVE VISIBLE LINES IN YOUR BROW AREA WHEN FROWNING?

Glabellar Frown Lines (GFLs) are lines that appear between your eyebrows and are most noticeable when you are frowning.

If you or someone you know have moderate to severe GFLs, you may qualify to take part in a clinical study of two drugs (Xeomin and Botox) that are approved in the U.S. for the reduction of these lines. We are seeking women between the ages of 18 and 50 years to take part in a post-approval study to evaluate whether the study drugs, Xeomin and Botox, are equally effective in reducing Glabellar Frown Lines.

Subjects who complete the study can earn up to $400 for their participation. To learn more about the study, please contact
